01:20:37 Betsy Bihn (she/her), PSA Director: I have several courses through eCornell. They are extension courses. I respect my eCornell colleagues, but our efforts with eCornell have not been without challenges. It is something we have to constantly pay attention to and interact with eCornell when things go wrong. For instance, most recently, a course launched 8 hours late and created issues for our participants.

01:22:09 Wendy Wilcox (she/her): Thanks Rob for clarifying about CPEP's involvement

01:46:06 Bryan L. Sykes: My internet is unstable, unfortunately, so I cannot come on camera. My question is general, and is about a range of expressive activities: How does the use of temporary suspensions ensure compliance with Title 6 protections against discrimination, especially if it produces inequities and differences across students of different national origins and documentation statuses? I could imagine that undocumented students, for instance, could face particular challenges if they protest mass deportations, children separated from their families at the border, and other immigration policy challenges. How does the use of temporary suspensions ensure compliance with Title 6 protections against discrimination, especially if it produces inequities and differences across students of different national origins and documentation statuses?

01:47:19 Tobi Hines: Reacted to "My internet is unsta..." with 👍

01:47:26 Noah Tamarkin: Not theater

01:47:47 Shimon Edelman: WOW, Siliciano's remark is despicable

01:48:13 Shimon Edelman: Replying to "WOW, Siliciano's rem..."

but not surprising, given this administration's record

01:48:28 Noah Tamarkin: Yes let's throw out the code

01:48:47 David Bateman: The code provides authority but authority is being abused

01:48:50 David Bateman: That's the concern

01:48:57 Noah Tamarkin: The code is illegitimate

01:49:18 Erik Born: As the Faculty Senator for German Studies, I object strongly to the Provost's disparaging remarks against my esteemed colleague.

01:49:21 David Bateman: I am amazed that the interim provost is going to slander faculty in this setting.

01:55:47 Saida Hodzic: Cornell is hiring "safety" officers to spy on students. Between January 2024 and now, Cornell could have hired more OSCSS staff. Not hiring them is not an argument for issuing suspensions, but for adjudicating more carefully.

01:55:58 David Bateman: Reacted to "Cornell is hiring "s..." with 👍

01:59:00 Ben Wrubel: Reacted to "Cornell is hiring "s..." with 👍

02:08:40 andrew yen: Totally support! Free speech and academic freedom in research and teaching is central to the integrity of this - and any - university!!

02:09:10 Juliana Hu Pegues: I strongly support this resolution

02:11:21 Shimon Edelman: the present commenter from CS is amazingly wrong on all his objections (including the relationship between CS and women's rights)

02:18:44 Maria Gonzalez Pendas: (Architecture) I strongly support the resolution, including that the faculty senate asks for public apology as well, also as a way to emphasize an urgent —urgent need for reassurance, support and trust for faculty's work and freedom from our leadership, not the opposite

02:20:17 Shimon Edelman: I strongly support the resolution as formulated.

02:20:22 Mark Lewis (he/him/his): What John S. said in apology is what Joel Malina should have done.

02:20:36 Shimon Edelman: Reacted to "What John S. said in..." with 👍

02:20:37 Wendy Wilcox (she/her): Reacted to "What John S. said in..." with 👍

02:20:45 Tobi Hines: Reacted to "What John S. said in..." with 👍

02:22:02 Rehana Huq (she/her): In simple organizational terms IF VP Malina did indeed make the statements that he did .. he violated what he is employed to do .. be the Chief Communications Officer and THE authority on what communications are appropriate ..

02:22:45 Saida Hodzic: I don't feel like Cornell has been committed to academic freedom this last year. The administration has created a hostile environment.

02:23:03 Ben Wrubel: Reacted to "I don't feel like Co..." with ❤️

02:23:09 Annetta Alexandridis: Well said!!!
